My 200 words on the video "How sugar affects the brain"

First, they have the people that they are narcissists. These people are mostly likely to have no empathy. They are constantly searching for the approbation to the other people around them. They are struggling with their self-esteem. When the narcissist does something wrong, they will feel guilt and really shamed about what they have doing. They are really concerned about how people see them, so they don't want to be see negatively.

After, we have the psychopaths. We must know that the psychopath is a narcissist but not every narcissist is psychopath. They have similarity in this two, but the psychopath doesn't have the guilt or the shame like narcissist feel. When a psychopath does something wrong, they don't feel bad for anything for themselves is the normality. This is why they are de best serial killer because they don't care about who can be hurt. Also, psychopath have a different anatomic nervous system. In their head they don't have the part of empathy so this is why they can lie, and they don't feel so nervous like a normal person will feel when they are arrested.

For the last one, we have the sociopaths, and a lot of people confused them. A sociopath is someone who has learned how to do things like how to break the rule. Majority of the time these people as had a difficult childhood. The difference between sociopaths and psychopaths is that they are more uncomfortable when they do something wrong.

My ChatGPT prompt is on the next page.

My ChatGPT prompt

Correct the language mistakes in this text. Do not change the tone.: First, they have the people that they are narcissists. These people are mostly likely to have no empathy. They are constantly searching for the approbation to the other people around them. They are struggling with their self-esteem. When the narcissist does something wrong, they will feel guilt and really shamed about what they have doing. They are really concerned about how people see them, so they don't want to be see negatively.

After, we have the psychopaths. We must know that the psychopath is a narcissist but not every narcissist is psychopath. They have similarity in this two, but the psychopath doesn't have the guilt or the shame like narcissist feel. When a psychopath does something wrong, they don't feel bad for anything for themselves is the normality. This is why they are de best serial killer because they don't care about who can be hurt. Also, psychopath have a different anatomic nervous system. In their head they don't have the part of empathy so this is why they can lie, and they don't feel so nervous like a normal person will feel when they are arrested.

For the last one, we have the sociopaths, and a lot of people confused them. A sociopath is someone who has learned how to do things like how to break the rule. Majority of the time these people as had a difficult childhood. The difference between sociopaths and psychopaths is that they are more uncomfortable when they do something wrong.

ChatGPT's output is on the next page.

ChatGPT's output:

< 2/2 >

First, they are people who are narcissists. These individuals are most likely to lack empathy. They are constantly seeking approval from the people around them and often struggle with their self-esteem. When a narcissist does something wrong, they will feel guilt and deep shame about their actions. They are extremely concerned about how people perceive them, so they do not want to be seen negatively.

Next, we have psychopaths. It's important to note that a psychopath is a type of narcissist, but not every narcissist is a psychopath. They share similarities, but psychopaths do not experience guilt or shame like narcissists do. When a psychopath does something wrong, they do not feel remorse for their actions; it is considered normal for them. This lack of empathy is why they can be some of the most dangerous serial killers, as they do not care about who may be harmed. Additionally, psychopaths have a different anatomical nervous system. In their brains, they lack the part responsible for empathy, which is why they can lie without feeling nervous, unlike a typical person who would when confronted or arrested.

Lastly, we have sociopaths, and many people often confuse them. A sociopath is someone who has learned how to break rules and often had a difficult childhood. The main difference between sociopaths and psychopaths is that sociopaths tend to feel more uncomfortable when they do something wrong.

My analysis of 3 changes that ChatGPT made:

1. Me:

First they have the people that they are narcissists.

ChatGPT:

First they are people who are narcissists.

My analysis:

I don't need they after that. It used who instead of that.

I also noticed that I should have said there are instead of they.

BEST: There are people who are narcissists.

2. Me:

We must know that the psychopath is a narcissist but not every narcissist is psychopath.

ChatGPT:

It's important to note that a psychopath is a type of narcissist, but not every narcissist is a psychopath.

My analysis:

"It's important to know" sounds more professional than "We must know".

I need to use a in front of psychopath. I'm not sure why so I'll ask the teacher.